two weeks. That's because the team of 13 Seabee divers and support personnel have been underwater, inspecting the piles under Naval Station Newport's Pier 2.

Ocean engineer Shawn Lindmark of the Naval Facilities Engineering Service Center, East Coast Detachment, accompanied the team to collect data on the condition of some sample 100 piles that support the pier built in 1958.

The project is funded by Commander, Naval Installations Command. There are 2,200 piles total under the 1,100-foot pier in Coddington Cove.

Operating out of a mobile dive station aboard an MTRV, the divers enter the 35 degree water with an ultra-sonic thickness gauge to inspect the steel casing around sample clusters of four and five piles. As of last week, they had inspected 60.

"We're taking measurements of the thickness of the steel to determine the impact of natural corrosion," Lindmark said.

The interior piles are concrete wrapped in a steel casing. Many exterior timber piles, or fender piles, have been damaged over the years, but are not load bearing, Lindmark said.

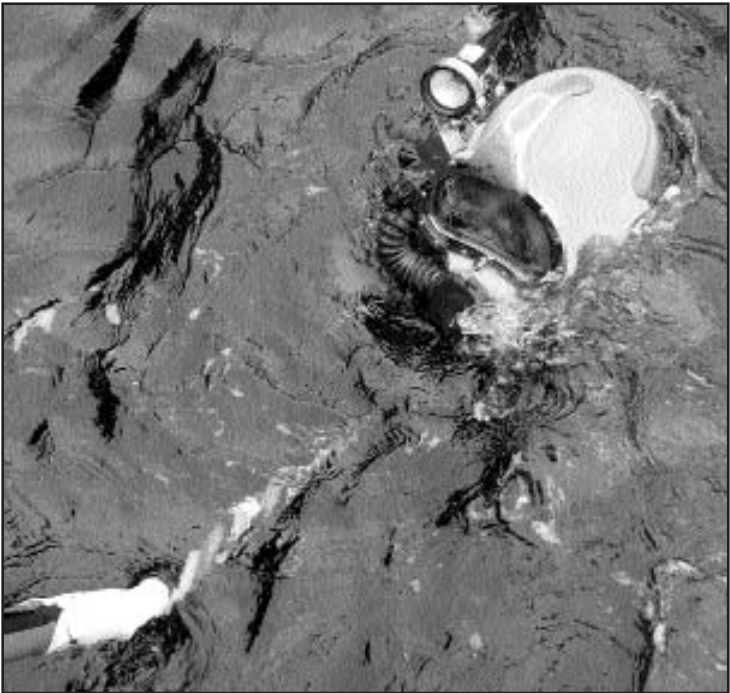

Pier 2 is home to three Coast Guard buoy tenders, the Naval Undersea Warfare Center's periscope testing facility, Pier Operations and NAVSTA Security Training, and periodically berths the NOAA fisheries research ship Henry B. Bigelow. There are also warehouses and office space.

Lindmark said over the years

SECNAV focuses on Sailor safety in off-duty hours

NORFOLK (NNS) — In his role as Secretary of the Navy, Donald C. Winter knows that he bears ultimate responsibility for the hundreds of thousands of Sailors and Marines who serve this country every day on ships and bases across the globe.

Engaged in winning the war against terrorism, he is aware of the crucial importance of the mission. However, Winter said a key element of the mission that often gets overlooked is safety, and he's made it a priority during his tenure as SECNAV.

"I think safety is critically important in everything we do," said Winter during an interview with the Naval Safety Center in February. "The mission is important and safety has to go right along. The men and women of our Navy are the heart of the Navy; and, if we cannot take care of them, then we are not doing what is expected of us."

Winter said he received a

real education about the hazards that go along with military service when he was a government contractor. In his opinion, the Department of the Navy does a much better job of caring for its own than civilian organizations typically do.

"Contractor responsibility really ends when the employee leaves the contractor's facility. In the Navy we have much broader responsibility. It is part of what I think is appropriate and necessary because being able to preserve our Navy family at large is critical to us being able to continue in the important missions we're engaged in," Winter said.

Statistically, Sailors and Marines are safer while actually performing their missions than they are during their off-duty time. Winter said he wants to instill what he calls a "culture of safety" that he believes will reduce the number of off-duty mishaps. He said leadership must be involved.

Although a large percentage of Navy and Marine Corps fatalities occur behind the wheel of a personal motor vehicle (PMV), the PMV fatality rates are actually well below that of civilian counterparts aged 18 to 34 years.

Redcoats in R.I. focus of lecture

NORTH KINGSTOWN — Don N. Hagist will lecture on, "British Soldiers in Rhode Island during the American Revolution," in a Rhode Island history program co-sponsored by the Cocumscussoc Association and the North Kingstown Free Library on Saturday, April 28, at 2 p.m.

Hagist worked for several companies in the defense industry and the private sector, including six years as a contractor at the Naval War College, before joining APC in 1994.

He is an avid historical researcher and has spent much of his life studying and researching the history of the American Revolution, focusing on the British soldiers who served in Rhode Island during that war.

He has published numerous articles on the subject, as well as two books: General Orders, Rhode Island (Heritage Books, 2001) and A British Soldier's Story: Roger Lamb's Narrative of the American Revolution.

The program is free and open to the public. To register, call the library's circulation desk at 294-3306, ext. 3.

Two win MWR trip 'Down Under'

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (NNS) — Two lucky winners will be heading to "the land Down Under" for the vacation of a lifetime, courtesy of Navy Morale, Welfare and Recreation's (MWR) Australian Vacation Giveaway.

Aviation Electrician's Mate 1st Class Andrew Thomas, of Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron Light (HSL) 43, Naval Air Station North Island, Calif., and Susanne Ellis, family member of Lt. Col. Richard Ellis, assigned to Joint Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., were the grand prize winners in a contest that drew over 16,000 entries.

Both winners and one guest each will take an 11 day/8 night trip to Australia, which includes travel days and time zone differences. Valued at more than $8,750 each, the trips include airfare from the contestants' chosen Information, Tickets and Travel (ITT) office to Australia, accommodations and two land tours.

"I can't believe I won," said Thomas. "My wife and I were saving up for a honeymoon in Italy and now with the trip from MWR, we can spend our honeymoon in Australia!"

The contest, which was held Oct. 1 through Dec. 1, was made possible through a partnership between MWR's ITT office, Qantas Airlines and Military Tours. The winners were officially selected Feb. 20.

"MWR customers who are interested in learning about the different vacation destinations in Australia or planning their own trip can visit www.ittaustalia.com," said Dawn E. Smith, Navy MWR's ITT program manager.

responsible for up until she could no longer work," said Don Zalewski, her civilian supervisor.

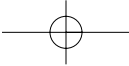

According to Zalewski, she was responsible for processing more than 12,000 limited duty personnel separations and retirements, more than 8,000 reenlistments and extensions, and many awards during her civilian service at PSD, Newport. Her individual efforts helped PSD to earn the certified pipeline mover recognition, 1992-1995, 1997, and 1999-2004.

"She worked in pain and never wavered from her job until it became unbearable when she had to stay home or in the hospital," he said. Even after being so incapacitated she still made an effort to call this office and check to make sure everything was still being taken care of, he said.

She was the daughter of Beatrice Silveira Silvia of Newport and the late Henry Silvia. She is survived by her partner Carol Ann Perry of Portsmouth; her twin sister, Diane Marie Silvia, and her sister, Teresa Jean Silvia of Newport.

Navy on parade

Thousands ventured out after last Friday night's East Coast sleet and snowstorm to watch the 51st annual Newport St. Patrick's Day Parade step off Saturday morning. The drizzle stopped just as the parade started opposite City Hall on Broadway at 11 a.m.

Crowds lined Washington

Square, and all the way down Thames Street to the finish point at St. Augustin's Church. The Navy and Marine Corps made up the largest contingent of participants, including more than 90 Sailors and Marines from the Seaman to Admiral-21 (STA-21) and Broadened Opportunity for

The U.S. Coast Guard was also represented with a color guard and RHIB boat, and Capt. Todd Malloy, Commanding Officer, Naval Station Newport, and his sons, Zach and Matthew, rode in their 1928 Ford Model A Roadster.

Fire apparatus and a patrol car were entered by the Naval Station Newport Fire and Police Departments.

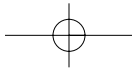

The parade, a highlight of Newport's month-long celebration of Irish Heritage Month, included a variety of floats, clowns, marching units from various service and civic organizations, school bands, and Irish step dancers.

NAVSTA Patriots rule intramurals

By RICHARD ALEXANDER
Navalog editor

The Naval Station Newport Patriots used strong defense in the low post and some sharp 3-point shooting by Chris Boling to run away from the Naval Health Clinic New England (NHCNE) and win the NAVSTA Newport Intramural Basketball League championship last Monday night at Gym 109.

The score was 62-50. Power forward Derrick Randle said the team used its speed, quickness off the outlet pass, and height advantage to score inside. NHCNE was forced to shoot from outside.

“Our trap defense was effective through the whole game,” Randle said. “It was a balanced offense, too.”

“We’re champions of the Naval Station basketball world,” he said.

The Patriots never trailed from the start, and even gave their bench players some court time in the second half. The NAVSTA Patriots were also finalists in the NAVSTA Intramural Football League championship last fall at Carr Point, losing to the Naval Justice School.

there have been attempts to shore up the weaker piles by encapsulating them with poured concrete. He said the pier is showing its natural age. During its peak use it was homeport to Cruiser Destroyer Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet and later, Destroyer Squadron 28 frigates and mine counter-measure ships.

Lt. Cmdr. Gerald Lowe, Executive Officer of UCT ONE, said data collected will be analyzed by NAVFAC to determine if piles should be replaced or repaired.

The team also brought a transportable recompression system for emergencies. Divers suffering from the "bends," or fast decrease in air pressure, can be treated on site. Both patient and doctor can fit inside.

Lowe said the project also constituted a cold water dive training exercise for the team.
